

TROOPERS' GREAT SACRIFICE

NATIVE OF COUNTY, GEORGE W. RILEY, KILLED IN LINE OF DUTY

Drunk-Crazed Colored Man Had Been Overcome After Firing the Fatal Shots.

George W. Riley, aged 22 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville S. Riley, of Straban township, died at the Uniontown Hospital, Fayette county, on Sunday evening from pistol wounds received while on duty. He had been with the detail of State Troopers sent to Fayette county to maintain order in the coal and iron situation.

On Sunday two colored men had a quarrel at Edenborn, Fayette county. They were Chester Ingram, aged 30, and William Jayner, aged 31. They were drinking in Jayner's home and in the quarrel Ingram was cut about the head and left the house bleeding profusely. Securing a pistol he returned to the Jayner place and fatally shot Jayner, then sought to escape by running away. He encountered a coal and iron policeman who gave chase and emptied his revolver at the policeman, failing to hit him.

Young Riley was at the headquarters about 500 yards distant and heard the shooting and jumped into a car and hurried to the place where the shooting was going on. Ingram had jumped into a ditch to reload his revolver and State Trooper Riley appeared on the scene between Ingram and the coal and iron policeman giving chase. Ingram at once opened up on Riley with his re-loaded revolver and fired six shots, two of them hitting him. One of the shots entered the right side of Riley's body and took a diagonal course downward toward the left, stopping at the left hip. The other ball entered the left side of Riley's body and lodged in the stomach.

Though Riley had received his death wound after inflicting a scalp wound on Ingram's head he closed with him to get his pistol. The other policeman appeared in time to give Ingram a blow over the head with the butt of his pistol, knocking him unconscious. Riley then got in his automobile and drove to headquarters, 500 yards away and collapsed as he got out of the machine. He was taken to a physician's office and later sent to the Uniontown Hospital where he died an hour later. George W. Riley had been in the State Police force about a year. The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon, services by Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of St. James Lutheran church, and interment was made in the Evergreen Cemetery. ## SLONAKER ET AL NOT GUILTY.

Court Ordered Such a Verdict When Evidence Was in.

William C. McConnell, a former prohibition director, and twenty-eight other defendants, among whom was Jacob G. Slonaker, a former county treasurer of this county, have been "undergoing trial in the District Court of the United States at Philadelphia, on the charge of conspiracy as alleged in the indictment. The trial began the early part of last week and there were a number of surprises, among them that the government did not have and was unable to produce the originals of a number of papers. The trial came to an end Wednesday, when Judge Thompson presiding, addressing the jury said:

"There is evidence of fraudulent permits having been used. There is evidence of the unlawful withdrawal of whisky. There is evidence of unlawful transportation of whisky and there is other evidence and facts that could be submitted to you, but it does not prove that a certain conspiracy existed in this case. As I understand the law as laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States and by this Court this evidence is not sufficient to sustain a conviction on this indictment that is before you. I therefore feel it is my duty to instruct you that in this case you will return a verdict of not guilty."

It was sought to hold Jacob G. Slonaker, former chief prohibition enforcement agent responsible for the release of 247 cases of whisky which they had seized near Media. The Government was seeking to prove that this liquor had been withdrawn on a fraudulent permit and after it had been released on Slonaker's assurance that the permit was genuine, it was permitted by the prohibition officials to fall into the hands of bootleggers in the coal regions.

The case was said to have been one of the largest cases so far undertaken by the Government.

Town Council Meets.

The Town Council held its monthly meeting on Wednesday evening. The removal of R. P. Funkhouser from the second ward to Harrisburg having created a vacancy, John D. Lippy, Chambersburg street, was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy.

Councilman Snyder produced notes from all the property owners on South street agreeing to pay 50 cents a front foot for a water-bound macadam street and same was ordered. It was stated that the property holders on the first block of West Middle street were willing to pay their share of an improved street but as the matter had not been put in writing with the lot holders no action was taken.

The balance of a note of $200 for the improvement in the public square of the circle was ordered paid, the property owners having paid the large part of the cost of the improvement.

Authority was granted for the erection of a second cupola on the rear of the engine house for the purpose of providing a place for the electric siren the Fire Company will install.

Edward Newman, street superintendent, was made superintendent of sewers.

Council decided to sell the hand-drawn hook and ladder truck, occupying needed room in the engine house. Both automobile fire trucks being equipped with ladders, the older hook and ladder truck is not needed. It is likely it will be sold to a borough in the county.

Burgess Wm. E. Olinger was instructed to enforce ordinances against speeding and to secure the aid of the State Police to this end.

ARENDTSTVILLE.

Owing to the daylight saving that was put into effect on the 30th ult., the morning mail that left the office at 8 o'clock now leaves at 7, and returns at 9. The noon mail that left at 12, now leaves at 2, and returns at 4 P. M. The office opens at 6:30 in the morning and closes at 7 in the evening.

The Sunday School conference held here last week was largely attended. There were three sessions, one on Thursday evening and two on Friday, one in the morning and the other at noon, and it wound up with a banquet on Friday evening.

The pear and early cherry trees that are fairly covered with white blossom and the peach trees with red blossom, and the nice green wheat fields make a delightful appearance.

Owing to the automobile now being so numerous makes Messrs. Harry Warren & Son's new garage a busy place repairing automobiles.

Rev. D. T. Koser, who resided in this town 36 years, and conducted services in the Lutheran church in this place and Flohr's church, has resigned and moved to Gettysburg where he purchased a home.

REV. REUDTER WELCOMED

A CHECK OF AN APPRECIATIVE SIZE GIVEN HIM.

In Grateful Recognition of His Services to His Church and the Town of McSherrystown.

Rev. Dr. L. Aug. Reudter rector of St. Mary's Church, McSherrystown, returned on April 25 from an extended European trip. He was accompanied by Rev. Father Codori of Johnstown, Rev. Father Ryan, of Worcester, Mass., and Rev. Dr. Coad, of St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg. The quartette of travelers visited Alexandria, Egypt; Jerusalem and other points of interest in the Holy Land; Athens, Greece; Monte Carlo, the Holy See in Rome and other points in Italy. Rev. Dr. Reudter left McSherrystown on February 7, meeting the other members of his party in New York City.

About 500 parishioners of St. Mary's Church on Sunday evening immediately following the church services, gathered in St. Mary's Hall to formally extend a welcome to the pastor, the Rev. Dr. L. Aug. Reudter, who recently returned from a European trip.

The hall and balcony were filled to capacity and when all were seated, Rev. Leo B. Kirchner, assistant pastor, went to the rectory where he informed Dr. Reudter that he was wanted in the hall. When both clergymen returned the program was opened by Misses Bernadette and Violet Weaver, who played a piano duet under the direction of Miss Marie Timmins. A. J. Brady then took charge calling attention to the great work Rev. Reudter has accomplished and the high appreciation of his parishioners for it, referring to the building of St. Mary's School and the enlargement of the parish. In conclusion he presented to the surprised pastor an envelope containing a very substantial check given as an appreciation of his services.

The pastor taking the floor then acknowledged the large turnout of his members, and thanked them for their kind expressions of appreciation, assuring them his sole purpose in the pastorate was the bettering of the town and St. Mary's parish and the saving of souls. He felt that he would be materially aided in the work by his European trip. He also assured them that he would wish nothing better than to remain in the local pastorate to the end of his days seeking to build it up still more. Referring to the school work he said in traveling through Europe he saw the wonderful progress being made everywhere in higher education.

He then opened the letter handed to him which contained a check for $135, which he accepted feeling that he could not have done so, had it not been a free-will offering coming to him as a great surprise.

The meeting closed with the singing of "Welcome Home" by sixteen members of the St. Cecilian Glee Club with Miss Timmins at the piano. Closing remarks were also made by Rev. Father Berwaski who had assisted Rev. Kirchner during the absence of Dr. Reudter. This morning Rev. Berwaski returned to the monastery in Reading to resume his work as a missionary. He said he will ever remember his stay in McSherrystown.

A dinner was tendered in St. Mary's rectory to a number of priests from this vicinity, friends of Rev. Dr. L. Aug. Reudter in honor of his safe return from his European trip. The affair was successfully arranged by Rev. Leo B. Kirchner, Rev. Reudter's assistant. Those present were: Dr. Reudter, Rev. Kirchner and Rev. L. A. Berkowski, of this place; Very Rev. J. A. Huber and assistant, Rev. T. O'Hanrahan, Hanover; Rev. W. A. Howard, Midway; Rev. John Eberle, Conewago Chapel; Rev. Brendon, Rev. Stephen and Rev. Ader, Paradise; Rev. George Breckel, Rev. Whitman, Rev. Harry Howarth and Rev. McGrath, York; Rev. P. J. Bruegeman, Rev. P. Stieff, and Rev. Geo. Brown, Columbia; Rev. M. Scanlon, Bonneauville; Rev. W. J. O'Callahan, Littlestown; Rev. Mark Stock, Gettysburg; Rev. Patrick McGee, Daltown; Rev. W. W. Whalen, Orrtanna; Rev. Patrick Phelan, Hershey; Rev. George Rice, Harrisburg.

Why Harding Can't be Re-elected.

Wilson D. Youmans, of Yorkers, N. Y., wrote a letter to the New York Tribune recently, which was printed on the editorial page in which he said he was "amazed" at a recent statement that President Harding would be renominated, and then offered on his own account "a few good reasons why it would be impossible to re-elect Warren G. Harding." He said the suffering and extortion of thousands of people due to the shortage of coal in New York and New England last winter were chargeable to President Harding because he "was not equal to the situation" or "was not big enough." He also blamed President Harding for alienating former service men from the Republican party and referred to his advocacy of American representation in the International Court of Justice as "a smoke screen" designed to divert attention from his failures in administering domestic affairs.

FOREST PROTECTION.

Davey, the Country's Great Tree Expert, Makes Suggestions.

Last Week was Forest Protection Week and a statement by Congressman Martin L. Davey, general manager of the Davey Tree Expert Company, was the most interesting treatment of this serious problem. He made the following suggestions:

First. According to the report of the U. S. Forest Service to the Senate some three years ago, there are in this country "eighty-one million acres of land so severely cut and burned as to become an unproductive waste." There are undoubtedly other millions of acres that are of little or no value for anything else except for growing trees. The Federal Government should proceed forthwith to buy up this cheap, waste land and undertake a wholesale program of reforestation.

Second. All lumbering from now on should be placed under the control of the U. S. Forest Service, so that the present wasteful and devastating practices may be eliminated. This is necessary if we are to preserve the present supply until we can grow more. The entire lumber supply of the eastern half of the United States will be exhausted commercially in about fifteen years. The supply for the entire country will be exhausted commercially in from thirty to forty years.

Third. There should be levied by the Federal Government, a tax of some reasonable amount on every thousand feet of lumber cut from now on. Every dollar of this money should be turned into reforestation and measures of conservation. We must find some way to pay the cost of a great national program.

Fourth. The Federal Government should, as far as its authority extends, eliminate all taxes on growing timber lands. The Government should also urge every State to lift the taxes from growing timber lands. The purpose of this is to make it reasonably possible for individuals to start growing timber on parcels of land not suited to other purposes. These taxes make the growing of timber prohibitive. There are many farms scattered throughout this country on which there are parcels of land that ought to be planted to forest trees, and yet as soon as the farmer would undertake this, there would be a constantly increasing tax value and a constantly increasing penalty. If all taxes were lifted from such land, there are many who ought to respond to the general need by utilizing land that is not very suitable for other purposes. The tax should not be assessed against the growing timber, but should be collected from the lumber when it is cut.

Fifth. The land around the head waters of all important streams should be reforested, without regard to its value for other purposes. The question of an adequate water supply for the cities of this country is one of very grave importance. The shortage of water in certain seasons of the year is coming to be one of vital concern.

Sixth. In providing these National Forests, there should be incorporated with them, game preserves and bird sanctuaries to protect and build up the wild life of this country. This is important from an economic standpoint as well as from the standpoint of the pleasure and satisfaction of the American people. There should be created great hunting preserves under proper supervision and control so that the plain people of America may have places to go for clean sport. These preserves should belong to all the people. This would provide all sportsmen with ample opportunity to enjoy the life they love. It would give them places within a reasonable distance of home where they would have a right to go, and where there are no "Keep Out" signs. It would remove from the farmers of the country the problem of dealing with sportsmen and eliminate this source of conflict and give the manhood of this country an opportunity to enjoy God's Great Outdoors.

There is no question that affects America more than this—no question projects itself farther into the future of this country. We trouble ourselves regularly with many problems that are of temporary importance and subject to constant changes. Some of these things that we deal with so laboriously, cease to be of great importance after a time. But the future destiny of America is bound up in this question of conserving our forest assets and building them up. No nation ever survived that destroyed its forests.

Postmastership Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission, at the request of the Postmaster General, announces a competitive examination for postmaster in Gettysburg. Although held by the Civil Service Commission, the examination for the second class office here will not be under the civil service act and rules. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated upon their education, training, business experience and fitness. Appointment as postmaster of Gettysburg carries with it a salary of $2900 a year.

Robert C. Miller, present acting postmaster here, since the resignation last month of Charles S. Duncan, Esq., is expected to be the only person to take the coming examination, which will be held on May 10.

The mountaineers of Buchanan Valley are commenting on the vigor and youthful prowess of Bishop Philip R. McDevitt, of Harrisburg, who confirmed a large class at the Old Jesuit Mission Sunday. Saturday night his lordship made a flying trip from Harrisburg to the famous old region. He Forded from Chambersburg in the pouring rain. He was up with the sun Sunday morning. Read the first mass at which he preached, and gave the Sacrament of the hidden Lord in the consecrated bread to the faithful. He also preached a masterly discourse at the second mass. Had a conference with the clergy of Franklin county. Twice in the afternoon he preached, holding a congregation of Catholics and Protestants and non-believers enthralled.

Then in a proud mountaineer's auto the Bishop left Buchanan Valley at 5 P. M., and was in Steelton in time to close a Mission at St. James Church there. This morning his lordship is busy with the oral and written examinations of his junior clergy. And his date book for this week is pretty well filled up. The "endurance dancers" who are stealing publicity for the hours they spend in the same little circles and slides could copy sensible use of their strength from the Bishop. He's as full of energy and activity as the youngest curate with the oils of priestly concentration scarce dry on his hands.

Assisting at the confirmation were Fathers F. C. Noel, of Chambersburg, Dean of Franklin county, Edward O'Flynn, of Waynesboro, Dennis Reardon, chaplain of Mont Alto, and W. W. Whalen, the pastor. The splendid little old church was surrounded by autos of every make and build, in which a very popular type predominated, that type varying as to model. York, Chambersburg, Waynesboro, Gettysburg, and Mont Alto were well represented among the laity.

The Bishop told the children that private prayer, in which the lone soul speaks to its Maker, was the great weapon needed in their coming fight for happiness here and hereafter. The talk with God morning and night would prove the manna their young souls needed in traveling through a passion-hot desert. He also brought home to them that public prayer in their church, giving God their reasonable service would also bring them strength from on high.

There was a thrilling moment when his lordship asked the young soldiers of Christ to kneel and promise with heart and lips to abstain absolutely from beer, wine and whiskey till they should reach the age of 21. He felt that when they come to such maturity without knowing liquor, they would not desire it then. It was truly inspiring and many older eyes were wet when the piping voices raised in that solemn promise. Their words rang even beyond the church out to the mountains with their budding arbutus and hoary rocks. It was religion, pure and undefiled, giving virginal vocal expression in a spot that has very much of the Creator's grandeur.

Bell Telephone Proposition.

Bell Telephone System stock may be purchased at any business office of the company, according to an announcement by H. F. Bollinger, local manager. Purchases may be made for cash or on the installment plan.

This plan is put in effect through the Bell Telephone Securities Co., a part of the Bell System. When an order is placed at the local office, the stock is purchased on the New York Stock Exchange by the Securities Company. The price quoted each day is the previous day's closing on the Exchange.

During the past year efforts have been made to widen the distribution of Bell System stock through local banks and brokers. The new plan is supplementary to the previous efforts and places the stock within the reach of many who may desire to purchase it, but who have no local connections through which the purchase may be financed.

The Securities Company is not financing this plan on a profit making basis, but is carrying out the ideal of the Bell System "Every Subscriber a Stockholder."

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (Bell System) has the widest stock distribution of any corporation in the country to-day. There are more than a quarter of a million stockholders. With this new system of distribution, by which the stock may be purchased on very low monthly installments there should be a still greater increase in the number of share holders.

COLDS AFFECT THE KIDNEYS.

Many Gettysburg People Have Found This to be True.

Are you wretched in bad weather? Does every cold settle on your kidneys?

Does your back ache and become weak?

Are urinary passages irregular and distressing?

These symptoms are cause to suspect kidney weakness.

Weakened kidneys need quick help. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for weakened kidneys.

C. B. Strausbaugh, retired farmer, 204 W. High St., says: "I caught a cold which had me feeling lame and weak. When I stooped a little too much, a stitch took me in my back. I was troubled with lameness over my kidneys every morning until I had been up a little while. Backache had me all out of shape and it didn't take very much work to sap my strength. My kidneys were so weak, I could hardly control the passages of the secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and a few boxes, which I got from the People's Drug Store, corrected all these troubles."

COMMENCEMENT IS INVESTMENT TIME

Once more our schools and colleges come to graduation time. School is an outfit shop. It is when we get the tools with which to do our part of the world's work.

Graduation day is not a time to recall achievements but to plan them. It is not a day for reflection, but of prediction, a time for looking forward, not backward.

Education is the search for truth. Truth is progress.

The bud is a manifestation of the truth of nature. Because it is true to the laws of nature it does not remain a bud but unfolds into the flower. The seed laid in the clod finds its way to the light.

Light is truth. Be a light seeker. Truth is ever ahead, never behind. Keep pursuing it. You cannot serve truth and repose.

We seek education that we may know how to progress, to serve; that in this world we may be live seed and not dead seed.

It is not what you know that gives you recognition in the world, but what you know how to do.

Commencement is not accounting time—it is investment time.

The intellectual miser is of no more use in the world than the money miser. The world never honors an idle intellect. There is but one nobility that lasts and that is the nobility of usefulness.

He who cannot USE that which he has acquired from his text books has labored in vain for his grades. We are measured by what we can GIVE, not by what we can GET.

Education is wasted time and effort unless it inspires us to test our strength rather than our weakness, to dare the impossible rather than complacently follow the line of least resistance.

The world has but little need of the man who can "do almost anything." But it has great use for the man who can DO SOMETHING.

Education, once looked upon as a luxury, is now regarded as a necessity. Once its influence was contemplative, now it is contributive.

In the dark ages people belonged to kings. When the light of education spread, kings belonged to the people.

Education emancipates. It is the advance guard of democracy. It demands that the rights of the many prevail above the rights of the few. It is altruistic, not individualistic.

If you are truly educated you are a friend of the masses. That is educated patriotism.

Education is a movement outward, not inward.

No day on the school calendar is so well named as Commencement. It is the beginning of work, not the end; it is the binding to duty, not the release from it.

It Was Time to Save

By ROBERT STEARNS

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Maud Denton told her two office chums that she wouldn't be able to have luncheon as usual with them that noon hour.

"Somebody asked you out," concluded Jane, and then, scrutinizing Maud critically: "Too bad you didn't know ahead of time, so you could have fixed up a little."

"Nobody asked me out," informed Maud, "only I have an errand to do and I'm just going to snatch a cup of chocolate and a sandwich at a drug store so I can get back at 1."

"Getting some new clothes?" queried Helen, inwardly adding, "It's about time."

"No, I'm not getting any new clothes," laughed Maud. "I'm starting in saving with the Uptown Building and Loan association. You have to get your money in Thursday in every month. It's quite a walk, but I guess I can get there and back, all right, in an hour if I don't have to waste much time on lunch."

Helen raised her eyebrows knowingly toward Jane. "There's always a reason when a girl begins to save. But, my goodness, I couldn't save enough to buy a set of muffin tins. The man who marries me will have to take me for what I am, I guess, not for my savings. A girl's got to keep up appearances."

"I'm not going to get married," retorted Maud. "I'm saving because it's time to save. I've been working five years, ever since I was nineteen, and I've never put by a sou permanently. And I was just thinking things over. Suppose I go on like that. Nobody's going to pension me, the way they do school teachers and firemen and things, and I don't believe I shall ever marry. Just imagine going on working in an office always. I pictured myself hobbling in to work on a cane when I was seventy or eighty. The Dentons are dreadfully long-lived. So I thought I'd begin to save; I could at least buy a berth in an old ladies' home," laughed Maud. "So now you know I must hurry off or I won't get back by 1."

Maud Denton started toward the office door, leaving Jane and Helen making more elaborate adjustment of hats and wraps. She took three steps down the corridor and then returned. "What I told you was quite confidential," warned Maud. "Don't say anything about my saving, I mean."

"Goodness, no," assured Helen. "If Daddy Clark found out he might cut your wages. He turned me down cold when I asked for a raise the first of the year. I told him I didn't have enough to dress decently on and he told me I dressed more expensively than his own daughter, and that I was getting every bit that I was worth."

So Maud was off, and after a brief refreshment at a corner drug store hurried along, walking the mile that lay between the Clark office and loan association.

Maud was detained longer than she had expected, for there were other young office workers who had taken their noon hours, this last Thursday in the month, to make their deposits, and the line was fifteen deep when Maud arrived. It was without the slightest misgivings that she waited. It did not occur to her that any reproval would await her if she were ten or fifteen minutes late in returning to the office.

It happened, however, that Willis Clark, Jr., whose dictation Maud usually took, had come in early from his own luncheon. He had looked at Maud's desk and found it empty.

"Nothing the matter with Miss Denton?" he had asked, turning to Helen. "Oh, no," said Helen, with an irritating emphasis on the "oh." "She had an important engagement. Anything I can do for you?"

It was Helen's manner more than Maud's lateness that really irritated Willis Clark, but he wouldn't have admitted it even to himself.

Often Willis Clark had had hankering to ask Maud to lunch with him, but never had he quite brought his courage to the sticking point. Besides, he had once overheard Maud declining a luncheon invitation from a subordinate in the firm. "I've made a rule never to accept luncheon engagements in business hours," she had said. Willis Clark had admired her decision when it came to the young man in question. He had tormented himself wondering if her decision would hold good in case of his own invitation, but he had never tried to find out. And now apparently Maud Denton had broken her rule. She had gone to luncheon with some one and had remained out past her habitual hour.

"You're not sore because she's late," Helen asked with what Willis Clark regarded as infinite impertinence.

"That's Miss Denton's own affair," said Mr. Clark. "She doesn't make a habit of accepting luncheon invitations in business hours," he added; and then wondered why he had said anything so inane.

"Oh, Maud isn't keeping a luncheon date. She's gone!" Here Helen stopped with a giggle. "I know where she's gone and why she's late, but she asked me not to tell. You'd have laughed if you could have heard her telling us about it. Honest, it was rich."

Willis Clark went into his office, but he did not start on the program of important work that lay before him on his desk. Instead he sat and specu-lated. Where could Maud Denton have gone? What would she be doing? Why had she not said that she might be a little late? Why had she told the other girls that she wanted to keep the matter a secret?

She might have gone in search of another position, but that was hardly likely when she had just received a raise in wages and had told his father only a few weeks ago that she felt that the concern of Clark & Son treated its employees with the greatest consideration. It was not that sort of suspicion that tormented him. Perhaps she had gone shopping—that was, after all, what he feared. She was doubtless looking through the showrooms of some housefurnishing concern making selections of furniture and housekeeping equipment. Some one had asked her to marry him while he, Willis Clark, had procrastinated and she had accepted and now it was too late.

He went to the door of his office and called to Helen. "Please tell Miss Denton, when she comes, that I have been asking for her. Tell her to come to my office at once."

When Maud went into Willis Clark's office her face was flushed with outdoor exercise—plus the concern felt over Helen's report of Mr. Clark's annoyance over her delay. But this did not hide the feeling of contentment and satisfaction that had come with the making of that first deposit with the savings association. If she went on saving at this rate for the next 20 years, she had roughly estimated, then by the time she was forty-three she would have enough to buy a nice little cottage and an acre or so of land. Then she could raise collie dogs or violets or Belgian hares or something and her future would have no terrors. She might even go on until she was fifty, then she would have an even more interesting savings. So it really didn't matter now whether she married or not. At any rate it was a pleasure to think that she'd never have to marry just for the sake of safeguarding her future.

Mr. Clark seemed very short that afternoon, but he made no allusion to her tardiness. It was not until a month later—the last Thursday in the month—that the matter was discussed.

"I may be a little late," Maud told Mr. Clark. "I will make up the time this afternoon. I am afraid it annoyed you the last time."

"It is quite all right," Willis Clark assured, and then he remembered the annoyance he had felt over her delay. "Of course, if you had a luncheon engagement it is difficult to come back within the hour. But I overheard you say once, Miss Denton, that you didn't accept luncheon invitations in business hours."

"I don't—usually," Maud said with a little blush. "But this isn't a luncheon engagement. It's just a little errand, a little personal business."

"But you'll have to have luncheon—"

"Oh, I'll snatch that at the drug store on the way," she said.

When Maud Denton went down in the elevator five minutes later, Willis Clark was standing beside her. He followed her to the street, then to the corner, quite as if the merest coincidence had led him to go that far. Then as she turned to go into the drug store for her bit of chocolate and sandwich, he laid a strong hand on her arm.

"Don't go in there," he ordered. "Come with me to the Ridgewood and afterward there'll be time enough to attend to your bit of business."

"But I don't usually accept luncheon invitations," protested Maud.

"This isn't usual—is it?"

And so Willis Clark and Maud Denton lunched together for the first time. After they had left the Ridgewood Maud tried to leave, but Willis asked permission to walk with her to the place where she had to do her business.

"Is it something you don't want to tell me?" he asked. "I think I ought to be let in on this secret."

Maud hesitated, then made her little confession. I am just going to the Savings association. You see, I thought it was time to save. It's really wonderful when you figure it out. If I go on saving $10 a month as I am now, why, by the time I'm forty-five, in twenty years, figuring the interest and all, it will amount to so much that I can almost retire. I told the girls it would be enough to buy my way into an old ladies' home—but I think it would be lots more interesting to have a little farm somewhere."

"You precious little goose," said Willis Clark, holding her arm close in his grasp. "Do you suppose I'm going to let you plan your future that way? When the girls told me you had some important business engagement before, I imagined all sorts of things. We'll go to the Savings association now and after that let's stop in at Farley's and look at furniture."

"But I'll be so late—"

"Yes, and you'll probably lose your job, but you don't care now, do you? You don't want to go on working for Clark & Son 20 years, do you?" And Maud said she didn't.

"Maud's Nest."

The original phrase "to have found a mare's nest" was a figurative expression denoting to imagine that one has discovered something wonderful that, in fact, has no existence. Hence, the phrase was used to explain an illusory discovery, belief in which displays foolish credulity. The original phrase was "horse's nest" and was so used as long ago as 1583: "Some dramatic pullet would stand clucking against me, as though he had found 'a horse's nest'." No other explanation of this phrase is known.—Literary Digest.

FARM TOPICS

Cattle Feeders' Day.

Several Adams county cattle feeders expect to attend the annual Cattle Feeders' Day to be held at State College on Friday. At that time the results of the college feeding test conducted during the past winter will be made known, and there will be some interesting talks by prominent cattle men and faculty members of the animal husbandry department. The Hereford Cattle Breeders' Association will hold its second annual meeting on Thursday and that night the Sirloin Club composed of students in animal husbandry, will hold its annual banquet which will be attended by visitors. Former Lieutenant-Governor Frank B. McClain, Lancaster, Dr. T. E. Munce, state veterinarian and J. Frank Wood, Pittsburgh Stock Yards, will be among the speakers.

Cabbage Root Maggot Control.

With the time approaching for transplanting cabbage plants to the field, the county farm bureau advises control of cabbage root maggot on early varieties. Proved methods have demonstrated that the control of this pest can earn money for the producer whether applied to the commercial field or the small backyard garden.

Small tar-paper disks or corrosive sublimate are the methods used in control recommended by H. E. Hodgkiss, extension entomologist at the Pennsylvania State College. The disks are placed about the plant stem when the transplanting is made and no further attention is required. The farm bureau office can advise where these disks may be secured. One-half tea cup full of corrosive sublimate diluted one part to 1000 of water is applied to young plants in this form of treatment, within five days after setting, and repeated within ten days.

State College and farm bureaus co-operated in this control work in seventeen counties last year with 173 growers. The disc treatment resulted in approximately 1000 heads gain per acre and more than double that increase was recorded where two sublimate treatments were given. Results of previous years were even more convincing.

Preparations for Summer Drought.

Cultivation to hold moisture need not wait until the corn or potato crops are planted, according to the Farm Bureau of Adams County. The winds and sun of May rapidly dry out the moisture stored in the soil during the winter and early spring. There is seldom a season when all of this soil water is not needed to produce a good crop. In fact lack of moisture at some part of the year is generally one of the most important factors in crop production. Later cultivation cannot hold or put back moisture which evaporated before the crop was planted.

The time to start cultivation is as soon as enough ground is plowed to make it worth while to use a harrow. Fresh plowed and unharrowed land is loose, full of cracks and air spaces and presents nearly ideal conditions for rapid evaporation. Not only will a great amount of moisture be saved by harrowing down each day's plowing but most soil will work down to a much better tilth if harrowed while still moist.

County Agent.

Judges to Keep Pensions.

The Assembly at Harrisburg on Tuesday declined to relieve the taxpayers of the burden of the Judges' Pension bill, which cost the State $34,000 last year and is expected to cost $120,000 for the next two years, defeating the Zook repealer by a vote of 115 to 67. Representative Brewster, of Huntingdon, read a letter from Judge Bailey, of that county, favoring the repealer, and the Huntingdon member said he believed most of the country judges objected to being made objects of state charity. Philadelphia and Allegheny members voted almost solidly against the bill, as did a number of Democrats.

Wild Horses of Sable Island.

Ever since the dismal failure to colonize Sable island in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence, when Canada was New France, there have been a few domestic animals on that bleak spot, relics of that ill-fated attempt. Some horses were among them, probably survivors of shipwrecks, for Sable island is a dangerous place and bears the name of the Graveyard of the Gulf, from the number of gallant ships which found their end thereabouts. The horses multiplied and developed into a hardy little breed of ponies. More than one hundred of these wild native ponies perished during the last winter, the government steamer, Lady Laurier, reported the other day when she arrived from a trip to the Atlantic graveyard. The covering of the island grass by drifting snow during a stormy winter was declared responsible for the deaths. It is likely that another such winter will put an end to this unique little horse colony.

Detroit Has a Kite Day.

Kite day has become an annual event in Detroit. So popular has it become that competitors in the events of the seventh annual kite day in May were divided into two sections. Those who live east of Woodward avenue floated their kites in Pingree park and those who live west competed in Woodward park. The East side contest was particularly thrilling because it was participated in by Chinese, Korean and Filipino boys. Oriental peoples are the most expert makers and flyers of kites in the world, according to the survey. This fascinating sport with them originally had an important ritual significance.

College Musical Clubs Give Concert.

The last concert this year of the Combined Musical Clubs was given in Brua Chapel last Thursday evening. A most delightful and varied program was rendered by the pick of the musical talent. It was the same program which met with such marked success in the different cities visited by the clubs on their annual trip this spring and here again the clubs were enthusiastically received.

The repertoire was interspersed by a charming violin solo rendered by Henry Scharf and a vocal solo by C. R. Simon, leader of the Glee Club and manager of the combined musical clubs. C. R. Gilbert proved a capable leader for the orchestra.

A resume of the program follows: "Lights Out" and "Rose of the Rio Grande," orchestra; "Viking Song, Glee Club; violin solo; "Wake Miss Lindy" and "Uncle Moon," Glee Club; "Encouragement" and "Fate," orchestra; "Kashmiri Song" and "Wait Till I Put on My Crown," glee club; "Flower Song," orchestra; vocal solo; "Luther's Battle Hymn" and "Land-sighting," glee club; "Farewell" and "Pickaninies' Patrol," orchestra. A humorous musical sketch entitled "A Breath from the Campus," and the "Alma Mater," wound up the delightful entertainment.

Tut-Ankh-Amen's Four Chariots

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with Earl of Carnarvon. Here are the wheels, bodies, poles and other parts of four chariots as they were found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt. They are made of various hard woods, covered with stucco gilt, leather and inlaid ivory. The floors are of hide, in one case of leopard skin. Embossed gold panels on one represent the king's prisoners of war.

Rev. Sunday Writes from Egypt.

The Rev. Wm. F. Sunday, who graduated from the Gettysburg College in 1916, and later from the Seminary, then served as pastor of the Second Lutheran Church in Chambersburg, is now traveling in Egypt and the Near East.

In a letter, written to the Rev. Dr. Henry Anstadt, of Chambersburg, Mr. Sunday particularly describes a visit to the tomb of Tutankhamen and Luxor, Egypt, and tells of meeting a real Sheikh. The letter was dated March 23, from Luxor. It follows:

"Life here is a series of surprises. I've seen and studied the Giza pyramids, climbed to the top of the great pyramid and have crawled through its mysterious passage ways to the very central chamber with the aid of tallow candles and magnesia.

It was our unique privilege to be invited to an Arabian home and our host spread before us an Arabian dinner. Without forks and knives we ate from the same dishes and "trusted to luck." Though the buildings were of mud and the environs typically Oriental the owner of these buildings also was the possessor of 100 acres of land, fertile and rich, valued at about $100,000. His hundreds of employees receive an average of five piasters per day, about twenty-five cents.

"A day's trip into the desert by camel brought us to an oasis in time to witness an Egyptian funeral. The sheik was very kind and invited us into his home for coffee. We were thirsty but rather than take a chance on his enthusiastic welcome we went on after the services. Here I saw the actual interment and heard the wailing of a bereaved community. Over two hundred Egyptians, no women, constituted the procession, and to see them approach the place of the tombs on foot, their camels following, was indeed a sight never to be forgotten.

"We arrived here at Luxor, after leaving Cairo but half finished, counting on three days there via our return to Palestine. The great tourist rush is just over and Dr. Shelton and I have the great Luxor Hotel to ourselves, excepting two English and one Italian gentleman.

"Yesterday we devoted to the Valley of the Kings and did it well, with the exception of two hours in the afternoon when we had to seek shelter because of the intense heat. One without much imagination is placed into the life of the fifteenth and nineteenth dynasties and upon a return to a modern hotel is astonished beyond expression in reflecting upon the revelations of these tombs. Surely these Egyptians believed in a strenuous, active and varied life after death.

"Of course the climax of Egyptian archeology is Tutankhamen's tomb, though Luxor, even without it, is and always has been the home of all Egyptian antiquity. Three weeks could be devoted to Luxor and its environs to advantage, but even a bird's eye view of the valley of the dead kings, in the center of which is the tomb of Tutankhamen, the sight of the many pillared and terraced Dier-el-Pahair temple, the tombs, the Colossi of Memnon, so silent and majestic in the great fertile Nile plain, the vista of the great Medinet Habu temples in their effective perspective, and, on the eastern bank, the quiet and beauty of the Luxor temple and the mysterious expanse of Karnak by day or moonlight, these alone impress one's memory indelibly.

"Early in the morning we leave for Cairo where I preach next Sunday night, then to Jerusalem for Easter and a month of camping on the matchless hills of Palestine."

District Fraternity Convention.

Beginning Thursday, May 2nd, the district convention of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity assembled here and continued on Friday and Saturday. Many notables belonging to the fraternity are expected to be present at the convention.

Extensive plans have been made for the entertainment of the delegates. Activities began on Thursday evening with a smoker held in the Eagle Hotel when a varied entertainment was given. Friday will perhaps be the biggest of the three days. This day is set aside to enable the guests to become acquainted with the battlefield. Arrangements have been made to transport them over every part of the field. Upon their return in the evening they will gather at the Eagle Hotel to partake of a sumptuous banquet.

Throughout the three days business will be intermingled with pleasure, with Saturday set aside as the time for the business meeting. It is undecided where this will be held, but a choice will be made between Philo Hall and the Y. M. C. A. This meeting will end the convention, and those who have no further interests in Gettysburg will probably leave in the afternoon.

With the extensive plans that have been made, the convention will undoubtedly be a decided success.

NEAR EAST RELIEF WORK TO CONTINUE

No Halt as Long as Dollar Remains in Treasury, Says Walter George Smith.

SITUATION STILL SERIOUS

Withdrawal of relief work in the Near East at this time would be a death sentence to thousands of women and children now huddled in refugee camps, is the opinion of Walter George Smith, member of the State committee of the Near East Relief.

In a statement explaining the recent action of the American Red Cross in announcing a discontinuance of relief work in Greece in June next, Mr. Smith said that "as long as there is a dollar in the Near East Relief treasury, we will not permit men and women to starve to death when American food supplies can prevent it."

"In any solution of the Near East adult refugee problem," Mr. Smith said, distinction must be drawn between Greek and Armenian refugees in Greece, where they are at least under a sympathetic government, and those refugees driven from their homes in Anatolia but still on Turkish or Asiatic soil, who dare not return to their former homes and to whom no nation will open its doors. They have proved themselves the most thrifty, and industrious people of the Near East, but under existing political conditions they have absolutely no chance.

"There are 32,000 of these Greeks and Armenians now at Constantinople; 20,000 on the Black Sea coast; 62,000 in Alexandria, Aleppo and North Syria and 4000 at Mersine. These refugees are dependent absolutely upon a continuance of charity contributions until political adjustments shall be consummated. The Near East Relief is desirous of withdrawing from all adult relief work and confining its activities to a constructive program among the orphan children, but so long as a dollar remains in our treasury we will not permit men and women to starve to death when American food supplies can prevent it.

"Besides the adult refugee work the Near East Relief will continue to care for approximately 65,000 orphan children now in Near East Relief orphanages and 60,000 more under our supervision. 95 per cent of these children are under fourteen years of age and 62 per cent are under twelve years. Virtually all of our orphanage work in the Caucasus, Greece, Syria, Palestine and elsewhere is outside the control of the Turkish Nationalist Government.

"It is the aim of the Near East Relief to place these children permanently on a self supporting basis. The emergency feeling of adult refugees is not a part of our regular program, but where it is a case of doing it or leaving men and women to starve to death, we do it. Records of the American consular office in Syria show that a majority of the 80,000 refugees who crossed the Turkish frontier are absolutely without resources of any kind."

Mr. Smith explained that the American Red Cross relief work has been confined exclusively to Greece, whereas the work of the Near East Relief is largely in Turkish territory.
